Let's Start!

English, Spanish, Greek. Let's talk about languages with Greg and Joe!

Learning Outcome

Accurately use basic information in simple situations.

Ask your partner:

- What languages do you speak?
- What languages do your parents speak? Write a list.

Can Do Statements

- I can say and ask who people are.
- I can express possession using my, her and his.
- I can talk about countries, languages and nationalities.

Let's Explore!

Joe and Greg have a conversation. It's about nationalities and languages.

* "It's" is the short form of it is. Example: It's a cat.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Joe: Your girlfriend is Chinese, right Greg?
Greg: Yes, she has a Chinese passport.
Joe: Do you speak Mandarin?
Greg: A little bit of Mandarin.
Joe: My girlfriend speaks Greek. She has Greek parents.
Greg: Do you speak Greek?
Joe: No, I don't. I speak Japanese. I use it at work.
Greg: Really? What do you do?
Joe: I'm a translator.
Greg: Wow! I don't understand anything in Japanese.
Joe: Do you know the expression: "It's all Greek to me?"
Greg: What does it mean?
Joe: It means you don't understand anything.
Greg: Well, when you speak Japanese, it's all Greek to me!

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Possessive Adjectives

You use possessive adjectives to share personal information.

Possessive adjectives go before nouns.

Pronoun	Possessive Adjective	Example
I	my	I have a girlfriend. My girlfriend is Greek. you (plural and singular)	your	You have 2 sisters. Your family is big!
he	his	He is Canadian. His girlfriend is Italian.
she	her	She speaks Greek. Her parents are from Greece. it	its	It is a nice day. The dog wants its toy.
we	our	We have a big family. Our family lives in Vancouver. they	their	They are happy. Their new house is beautiful.

Countries, Nationalities and Languages

Country	Nationality	Language	Example
Colombia	Colombian	Spanish	I am Colombian.
China	Chinese	Mandarin	I speak Mandarin.
Greece	Greek	Greek	Are you Greek?
France	French	French	Do you speak French?

A nationality is an adjective. It describes what country you are from. Nationalities have capital letters.

A language is a noun. Sometimes it is the same word as the nationality, but not always.
